

Global policy influencers set to discuss how to enable social enterprises and social investment

What is the role of public policy in stimulating the growth of social investment and social enterprise?

To answer this question, the British Council, the Asia-Europe Foundation (ASEF) and the Centre for Social Investment at Heidelberg University are convening policy makers and influencers from Asia and Europe to Berlin on 15-16 July for a policy dialogue that will share experiences in 29 countries and produce recommendations for governments seeking to build supportive eco-systems for social enterprise.

Read the full story at:

<http://www.guardian.co.uk/british-council-partner-zone/act-local-think-global>